

Layering

Take necklaces of similar lengths and place them on top of one another, creating more volume and drama!

Framing

Take a necklace with a pendant and frame it with a longer necklace. It acts the same as a frame around a picture, drawing the eyes to the pendant.

Doubling

Take a 30" or longer necklace and double it with a clip-it to keep it from sliding!

The "Y" Look

1. Take a long, "clasped" necklace and come around behind your neck with one side short and one side long in the front. Open the short side and put the long side through it. Adjust as needed.
2. Take a necklace and open the clasp. Wrap the necklace around your neck with both ends in the front. Clasp it 1/3 of the way up the necklace in the front of you.
3. Put on a "clasped" necklace with the clasp showing several inches up from the bottom loop. Take the already clasped side and go to the other side and clasp it.

Crisscross

Take a long necklace with multiple strands. Unhook the clasp and separate strands putting half of the strands over your head with the clasp hanging mid chest. Cross your hands and take hold of the clasp. As you uncross your hands, take the clasp to the back of the neck and connect. Add a pendant to the shorter strands.

Extending

You can extend most necklaces with the matching bracelet to add 7” or 8”! Be sure the clasps are the same.

Flipping

Take two necklaces, one with a pendant and lay one on top of the other. Flip the pendant around both necklaces 2 to 5 times until the desired length is achieved. To undo, simply reverse what you did.

Butterfly

Take a 30” or longer clasped necklace with the clasp in the middle. Put both strands behind your neck with the two loops hanging in front. Open a pin, catch both looped ends and close.
